

PROUDLY made in DUNEDIN

Artemis is now a market leader

Based on European tradition of fresh, potent and effective remedies

Impressive range: Sandra Clair, of ARTEMIS Herbal Medicine, with some of the top quality herbal teas, creams and tinctures developed by the company.

A DUNEDIN family business has quietly developed in recent years into a market leader in the field of therapeutic teas and herbal fresh-plant creams.

ARTEMIS Herbal Medicine was founded in Dunedin by traditional Swiss herbalist Sandra Clair in 1998, and has created a strong market throughout New Zealand for its top quality products.

ARTEMIS herbal remedies are highly useful for every household medicine cabinet and the therapeutic teas make an excellent choice in a personal tea selection or a catering outlet. These certified organic teas are fundamentally different from the flavoured and aged herbal teas available in today's market place and delight even those who normally don't drink herbal infusions.

The ARTEMIS philosophy is firmly based in the old European tradition of producing fresh, potent and effective herbal remedies for supporting good health as well as easing many of the health complaints modern life attracts. The ARTEMIS herbal remedies are for everyday use as it is the small daily steps that ensure good health now and in old age. They can be enjoyed by young and old.

The organic ARTEMIS range includes authentic therapeutic herbal teas (such as Tummy-Tea, Immuni-Tea, PM-Tea, and more), traditional European fresh-plant herbal creams and tinctures to deal with aches and pains, arthritic discomfort, itching and rashes, skin and wound care, and vein problems, as well as a very special herb-infused St John's Wort Oil. All are crafted using fresh, organic herbs, mostly grown within New Zealand.

The ARTEMIS range remains a "boutique range" because the herbs used are always those from the most recent harvest — giving better flavour in the herbal teas and creating creams with more healing potency, Mrs Clair said.

"That freshness also makes a huge difference to the strength of the infusion and the health benefits derived from them."

"ARTEMIS fresh-plant creams 30 per cent are the strongest herbal creams on the New Zealand market and ensure professional potency with reliable therapeutic impact."

A lot of care is taken with the quality of products, as illustrated by the production of the excellent ARTEMIS St John's Wort Oil. Mrs Clair and her husband travel to Central Otago each summer to pick fresh St John's Wort at its peak potency. They use the flower heads to infuse in extra virgin olive oil and create uniquely effective therapeutic massage oil.

"It's liquid sunshine." Because of its unique features and effectiveness the ARTEMIS range has quickly become sought after. ARTEMIS herbal remedies are distributed to more than 400 health shops, organic food specialist and health clinics throughout New Zealand. In Dunedin, they are retailed through Galliens Garden Pharmacy, The Health Shop Moray Pl, Otago Museum Cafe, Sunray Health 2000, Golden Centre Health 2000, Taste Nature, Mosgiel Health 2000, and Healthworld in Mosgiel.

Other outlets can be viewed under www.herbalmedicine.co.nz a website that also provides a wealth of information about the ARTEMIS Herbal Medicine range and their safe and effective applications.

"The reason our therapeutic herbal teas and fresh-plant creams and tinctures have become so popular, so quickly, is that they really do work," Mrs Clair said.

The continuing expansion of demand for ARTEMIS products has resulted in recent months in an exciting move for the company to larger premises in Fingall St, South Dunedin. Delighted with the progress of the company, Mrs Clair acknowledges the support of the Dunedin City Council Economic Development Unit, which provided in the early stages logistical and financial support in getting the ARTEMIS range into the North Island.

"We are also very grateful for the support we have had from the public who buy and enjoy our therapeutic teas and herbal remedies," she said.
